Paris Fashion: Atelier to Marketplace

MARIST ABROAD AND MOD’SPE IN PARIS

This program, a joint venture between Marist College and Mod’Spe Paris, will explore both the historic and modern roles of Paris as a center of global fashion, fashion trend and luxury branding. The study will begin with a comparison of French and American fashion industries and include a comprehensive overview of marketing strategies of classic French retailers such as Bon Marche and Galleries Lafayette, examine the importance of emerging trend at cutting edge Paris boutiques, and explore the specialty markets of French cosmetics, fragrance, accessories and intimate apparel. The study will also include visits to the workrooms and archives of legendary French fashion labels and to a trade event showcasing leading names in French ready-to-wear fashion. A combination of site visits and lectures will provide students with a concentrated exposure to the continuing power and influence of French fashion on modern global fashion. Additional visits to museums, cathedrals and other important sites within Paris will provide students with a well-rounded cultural experience.

THE COURSE

Three (3) credits will be offered for the program.

Undergraduate

FASH485L-150 Paris Fashion: Atelier to Marketplace

Note: Courses above may fulfill the elective for the Global Studies minor or serve as a Foreign Culture credit or for the Cultural Diversity requirement. Speak with your Academic Advisor for more information.

PROGRAM DIRECTOR

Prof Radley Cramer will direct the program. Students interested in the program need to meet with Prof Cramer to discuss program details and to receive permission to enroll in the program. A second full time Marist instructor/chaperone will also accompany the group to assist with logistics.

ACADEMIC PROGRAM

The academic portion of the program will be conducted by Prof Radley Cramer. Students are required to participate in all aspects of the program and to complete all required exercises for a final grade. Course requirements will include a journal of daily activities and a focused term paper. For more about course requirements, please arrange a meeting with Prof Cramer.

The course will provide valuable exposure to the continuing impact of French fashion producers within the global marketplace. Paris - one of the key epicenters of fashion history - will serve as an ideal location for the exploration of both historic and modern facets of French style and its impact on both international fashion and marketing trends. Students will come to appreciate the differences between French and American approaches, both culturally and in relation to the fashion industry. Understanding this relationship is fundamental to success in an increasingly global fashion industry.

Students are required to attend orientation/class sessions during Fall Semester 2009. Dates and times to be announced.

COURSE WORK

The program will include formal lectures and presentations, as well as visits to select business facilities. Students will keep a journal of daily activities, submit projects, papers and presentations while in Paris, and complete a post-travel, journal-based project.
