William Shakespeare is one of the greatest writers who has ever lived, and his plays are as relevant today as they were four hundred years ago. His work is everywhere, influencing our language, our literature, our politics, and even our ways of thinking about ourselves. We know of him and we know his stories; we have seen them come alive on the stage or on screen.

This program offers you the chance to get to know Shakespeare, not only through his writing but also through the history and the culture of his time. Through two weeks of travel in London and Stratford-Upon-Avon, you will encounter his life and legacy through plays performed by the Royal Shakespeare Company, the New Globe Theatre, and other professional companies. You will also visit historical sites relevant to Shakespeare and Renaissance theatre, and participate in lectures and a walking tour of Shakespeare’s London. You will get to know Shakespeare, his work, his world, and his city, and you will get to count London, one of the great cities of Europe, as your own.

Program Highlights:

• Deepen your knowledge and understanding of Shakespeare as a writer and as an individual living in a particular historical moment

• Become an accomplished reader and evaluator of Shakespeare’s plays

• Familiarize yourself with English theatrical practice, particularly as it bears on Shakespeare’s plays

• Get to know London, and become comfortable navigating one of the great cities of Europe
