Marist International Programs (MIP) offers a variety of study abroad experiences that support your language and culture objectives. We offer semester, full academic year, and short-term study abroad programs, around the globe. Modern Languages and Cultures faculty will work closely with you to develop your 4 year plan.

The Latin American & Caribbean Studies minor has provided me with the necessary information I need in order to one day live and work in the places I studied abroad!

Speak the Language. Work Globally. Live the Life!

What to do with a modern language education? Recent graduates have used their language skills to obtain positions such as: teaching in the US and abroad; working in social networks in Europe; working for global companies in the fashion and media industries; conducting international and domestic business; and pursuing graduate studies in law, linguistics, literature, speech therapy, medical school, chemistry, and education, among others. A modern language education can only enhance your career choices!

Our majors and minors, like our Pathways in the Marist Core, are easily combined with other interests and will help you develop linguistic and cultural proficiency. With us, you will be able to take exciting courses and obtain internships here or abroad.

On campus, small classes, dedicated faculty, and interdisciplinary courses focus on the development of skills in communication, information literacy, creative problem solving, and collaborative work. In addition, our Weiss Language Center offers all the technological, learning, and social support you may need to meet your objectives. We are a dynamic and diverse campus community committed to active global citizenship. With a modern language education you’ll soon be creating your own path!
