Essential Functions for Entry into and Continuance in the Medical Technology Major

- Visual acuity with the ability to distinguish colors and clarity of solutions and discern objects microscopically
- Natural hearing ability or hearing with the aid of an adaptive device
- Motor skills with the ability to move from one location to another inclusive of elevators and/or stairs
- Manual dexterity and fine motor ability with a sense of touch and ability to feel pressure and temperature changes
- Emotional stability
- Ability to perform well in a high workload setting
- Adaptability and ability to prioritize tasks
- Ability to work both independently and with others
- Willingness to work with biohazardous materials
- Attentiveness to maintaining a neat work environment
- Integrity and commitment to maintaining confidential information
- Ability to focus attention to accurately complete assigned tasks within an expected time frame
- Ability to communicate effectively in English both verbally and in written form
- Ability to read and follow printed directions/procedures
- Ability to stand and work for expected periods of time or with adequate accommodations
- Dependability, responsibility, honesty, and respect for others
- Ability to maintain a professional decorum and appearance