

Digital Education Workshop

Faculty Showcase Series Spring 2018

EDUC 351

Literacy, Learning, and the Arts in the Social Studies Curriculum

Dr. Jane Bean-Folkes

School of Social and Behavioral Sciences

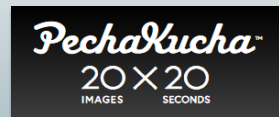

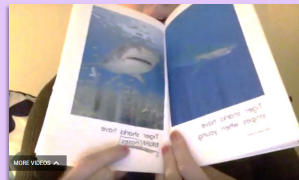

Collaborative Lesson Plan

How would YOU like to create vlogs to record your thoughts from your experiences?

Take this opportunity to learn and draw connections to your own courses!

Using Vlogs to Reflect on Literacy Fieldwork Experiences

The Art of Concise Presentation

Come engage with Dr. Bean-Folkes on a personal level to review your progress, and address individual concerns!

WHERE

LB305, James A. Cannavino Library
& Online in WebEx

WHEN

9:00am - 10:00am
Assorted breakfast items will be provided
Wednesday April 11, 2018

REGISTRATION

CTE registration site:
<https://tinyurl.com/Bean-Folkes>
Or Contact Digital Education Office
(digital.education@marist.edu)

Dr. Jane Bean-Folkes teaches Literacy in Social Studies and the Arts; Teaching Content Literacy; and Student Teaching Supervision. Dr. Bean-Folkes is an avid reader of children's diverse and global literature. Her research interests involve multilingual classrooms, written academic language, African American Language, sociocultural and sociolinguistic perspectives of education for non-dominant language speakers as they learn the academic language in urban settings. She has served on national committees for the National Council of Teacher of English, the Literacy Research Association, and the American Educational Research Association. Her publications include a chapter in an edited volume published by Peter Lang and several articles appearing in journals published the National Council of Teachers of Education and the International Literacy Association, including The Reading Teacher. Additionally courses Dr. Bean-Folkes has taught at Marist, include: Literacy in Social Studies and the Arts; Teaching Content Literacy; and Student Teaching Supervision.