

Personalized Welcome Message for Ethics: 200L-721
Summer 2026
Dr. Kristian Sheeley

Kristian.Sheeley@marist.edu

Required Texts:

Nicomachean Ethics, by Aristotle. Translated by Robert C. Bartlett and Susan D. Collins. The University of Chicago Press. ISBN: 978-0-226-02675-6

Meditations, by Marcus Aurelius. Translated by Gregory Hays. Modern Library. ISBN: 978-0812968255.

All other texts will be provided to students digitally on Brightspace.

Bio:

My name is Dr. Sheeley, and I am a full-time Lecturer in the Philosophy and Religious Studies Department at Marist. I earned a PhD in philosophy from the University of Kentucky in 2023. My research focuses on ancient Greek virtue ethics, and I have taught many ethical texts in my courses over the years, so the material in this course is familiar territory for me. Nonetheless, I never get tired of talking about ethics, so I'm really excited to read and discuss some of the greatest ethical texts ever written with you. As Socrates states in Plato's Apology, it is "the greatest good" for human beings to "discuss virtue every day," since doing so can improve our overall well-being. Outside of my work, I spend much of my time listening to and making music, reading great books, traveling, and skiing with my friends.