Da Nang, Vietnam

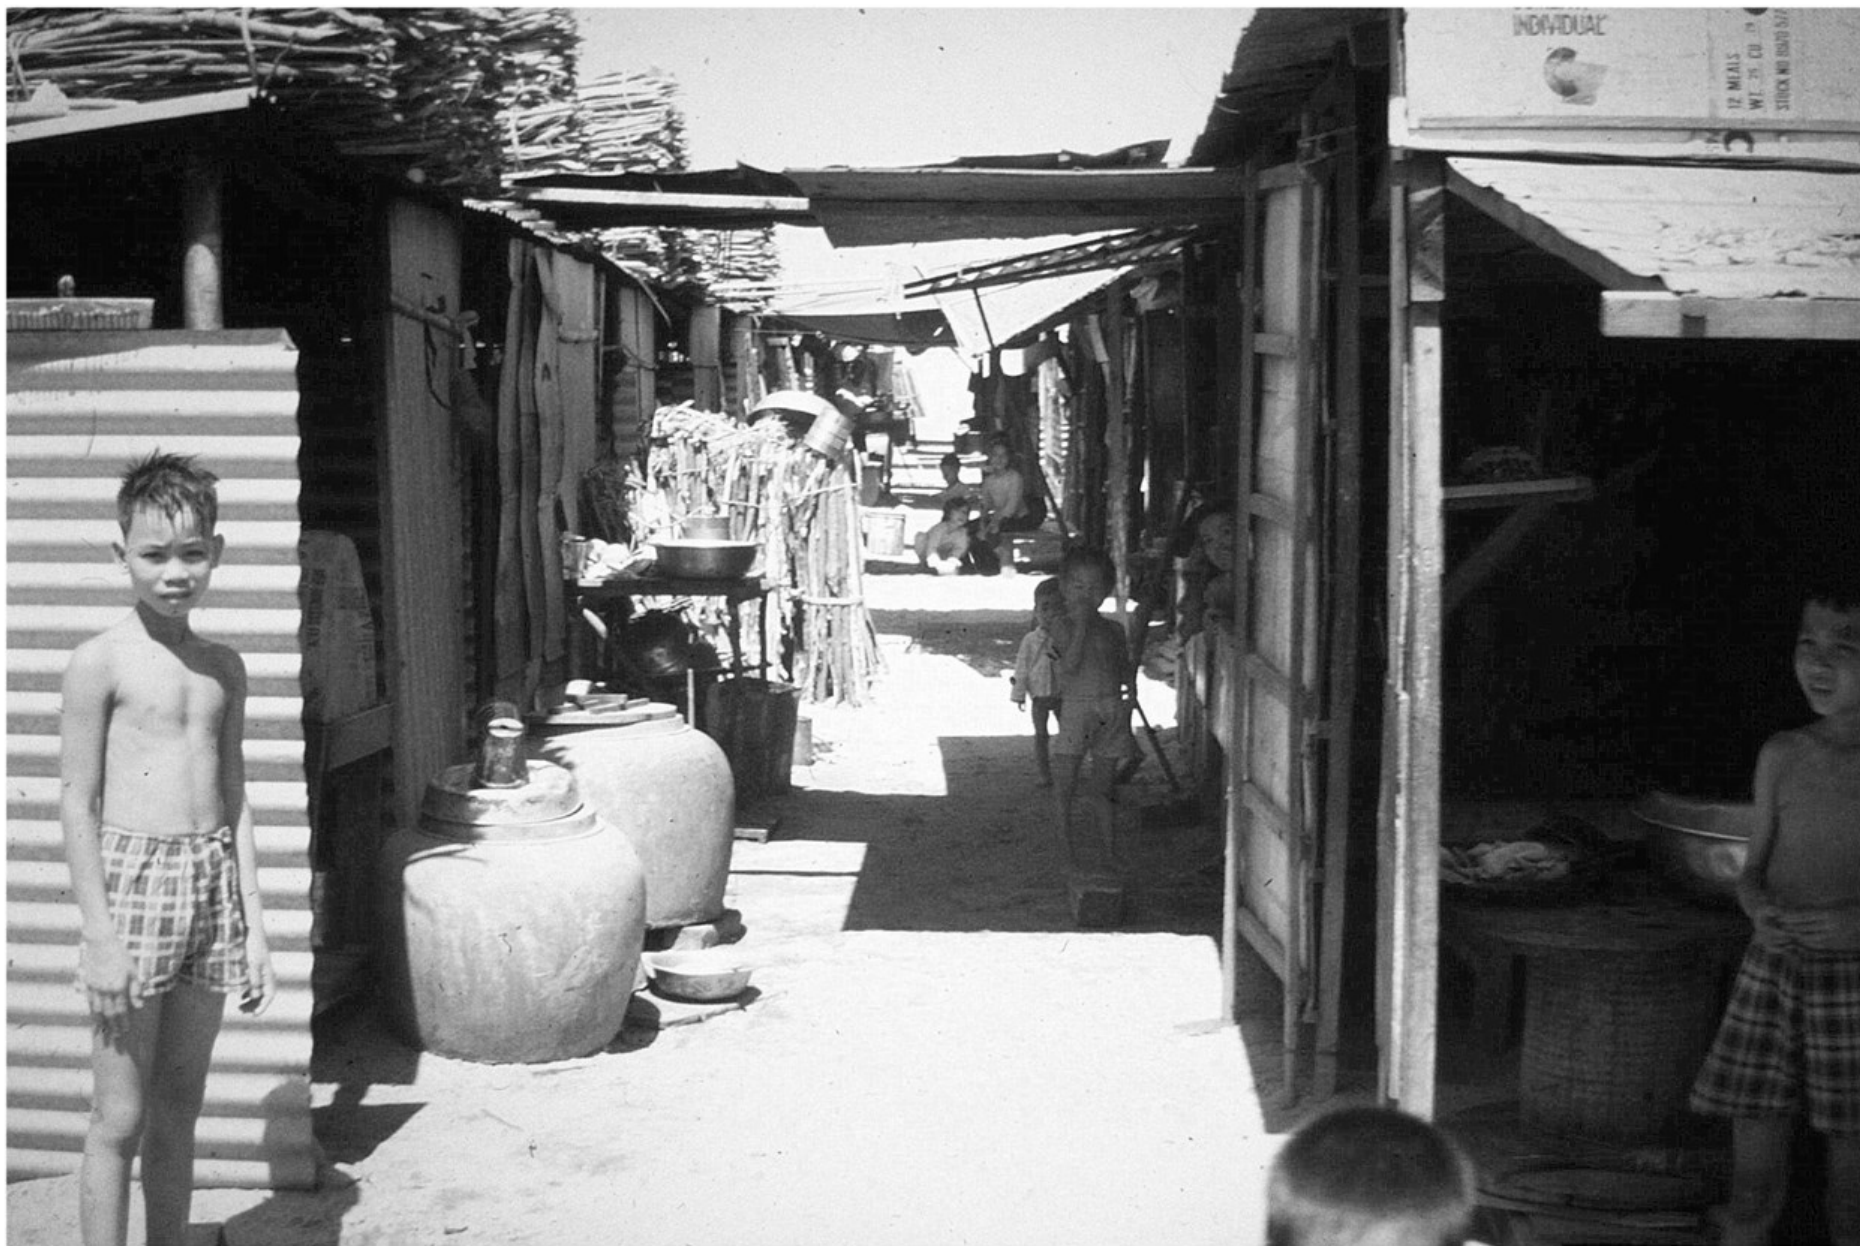

Fig. 2 The refugee village outside Da Nang. The bundles of branches on the roofs and pathway were used as cooking fuel. A central well provided water.

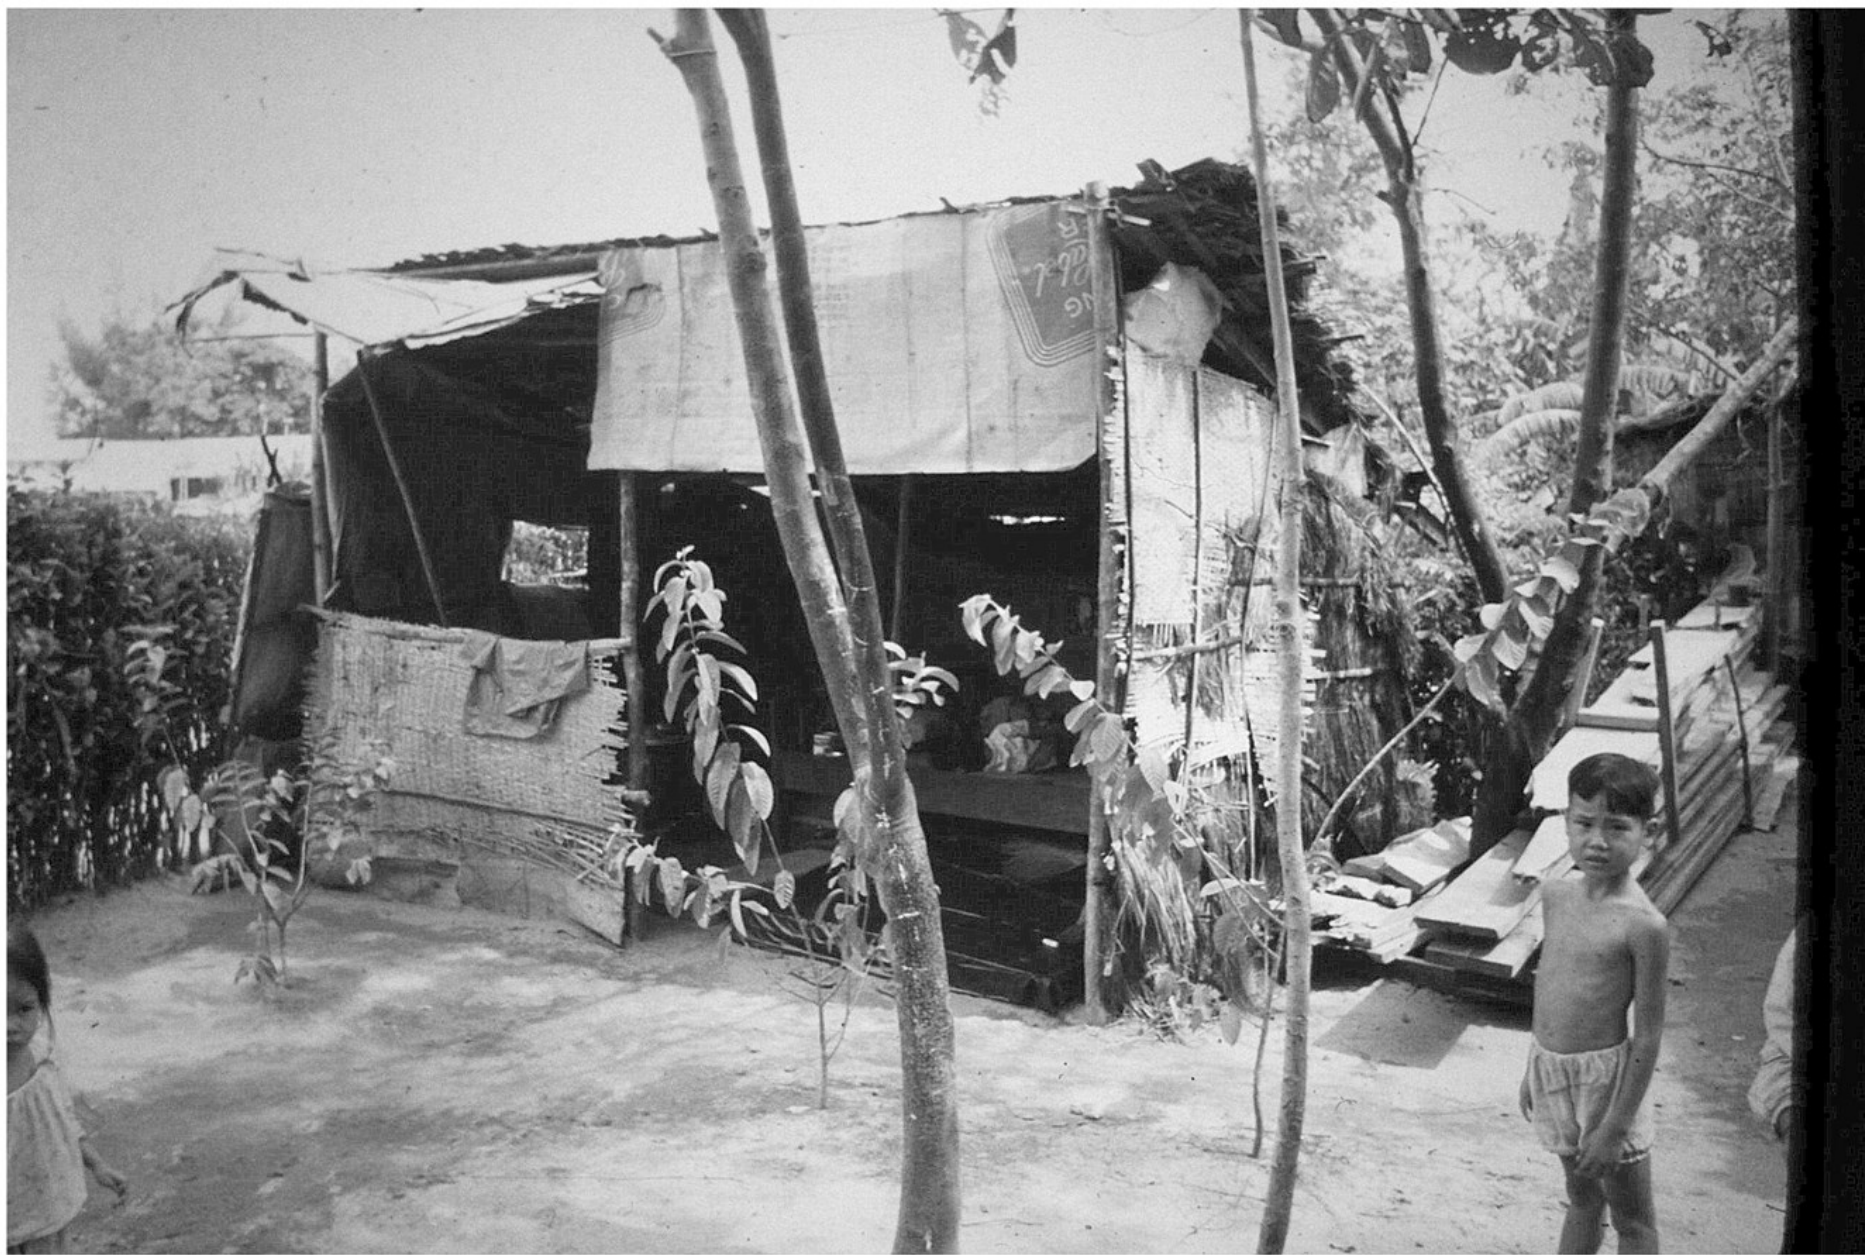

Fig. 2 A typical family home in the jungle villages outside Da Nang city, using found materials.

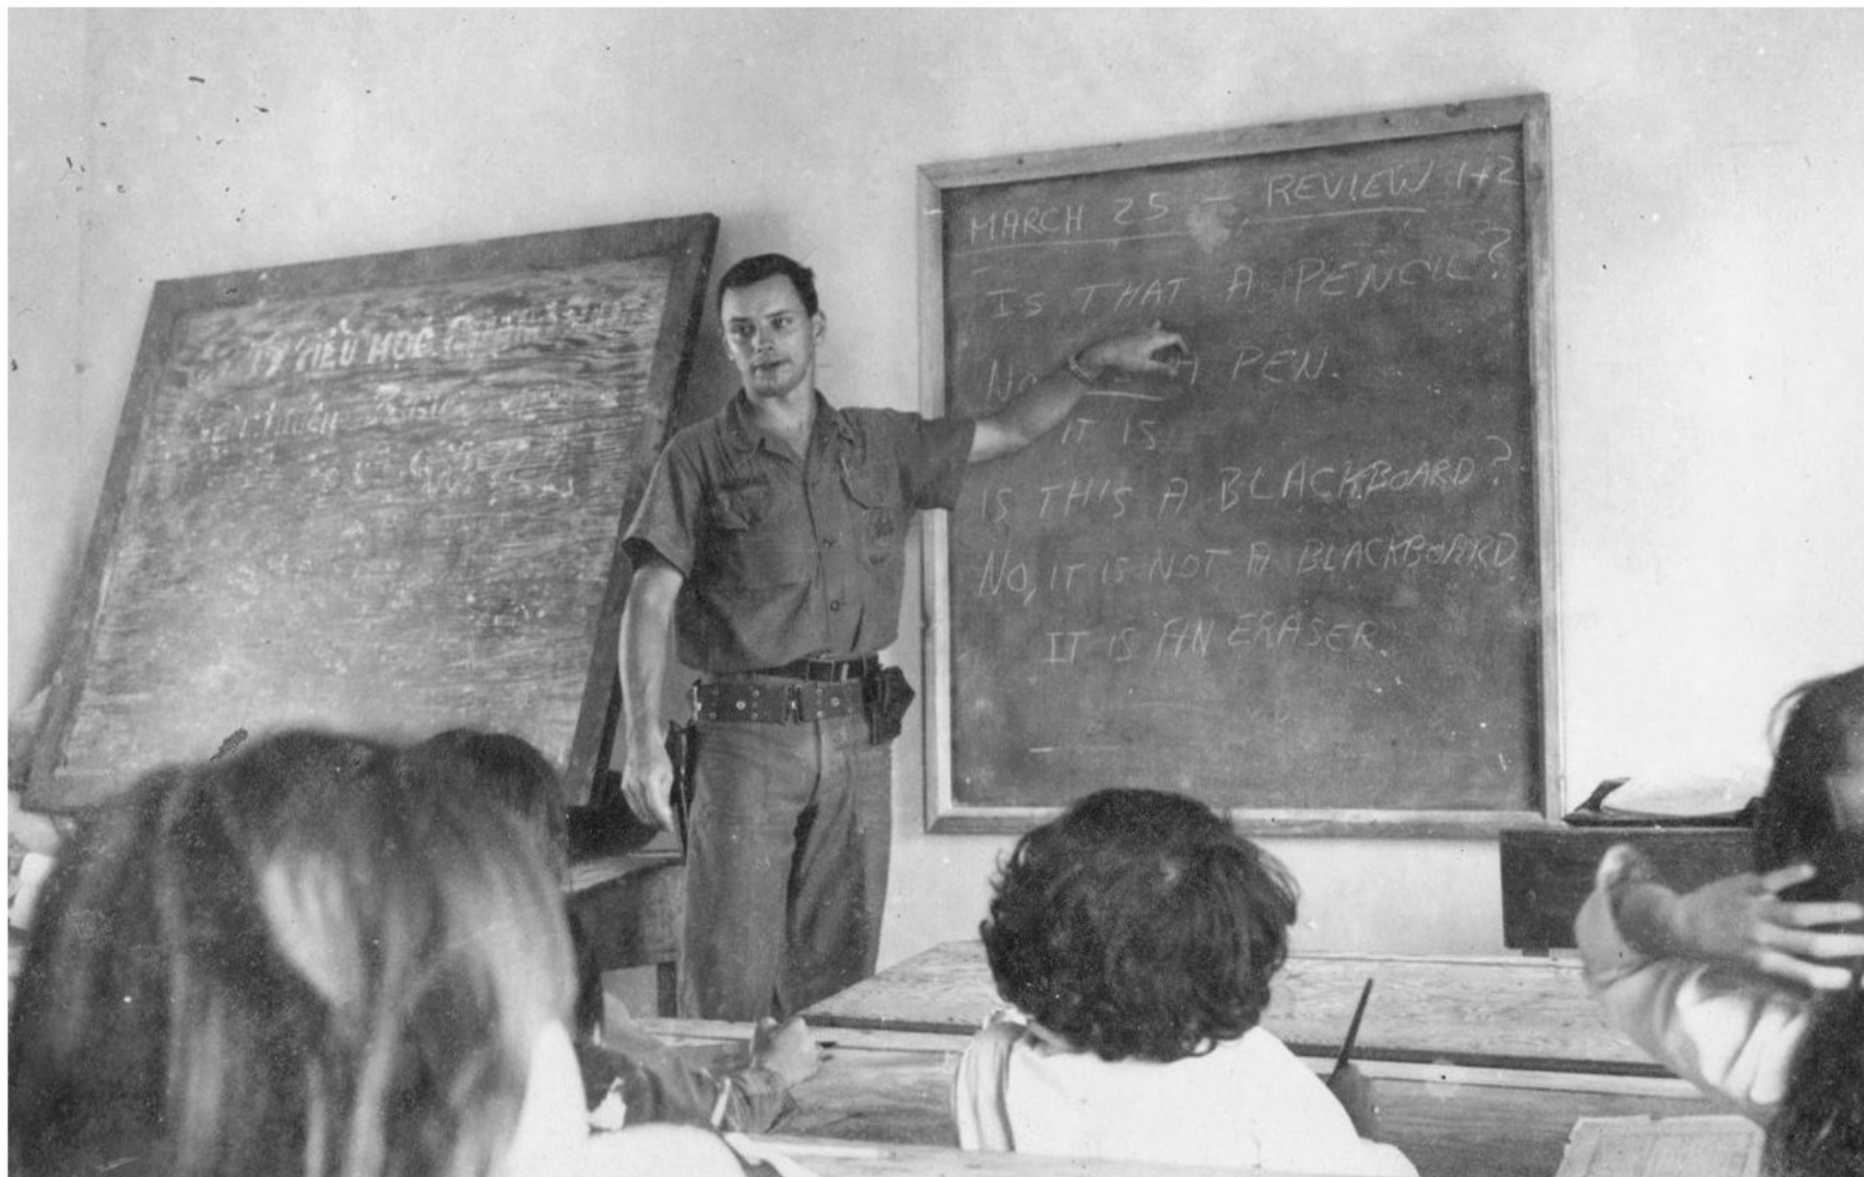

Fig. 4 At the grammar school of My Thy village, Seabee Craig Marshall taught English to several grades of students. This school building was better than most village schools, which had dirt floors, no walls, and crude benches.

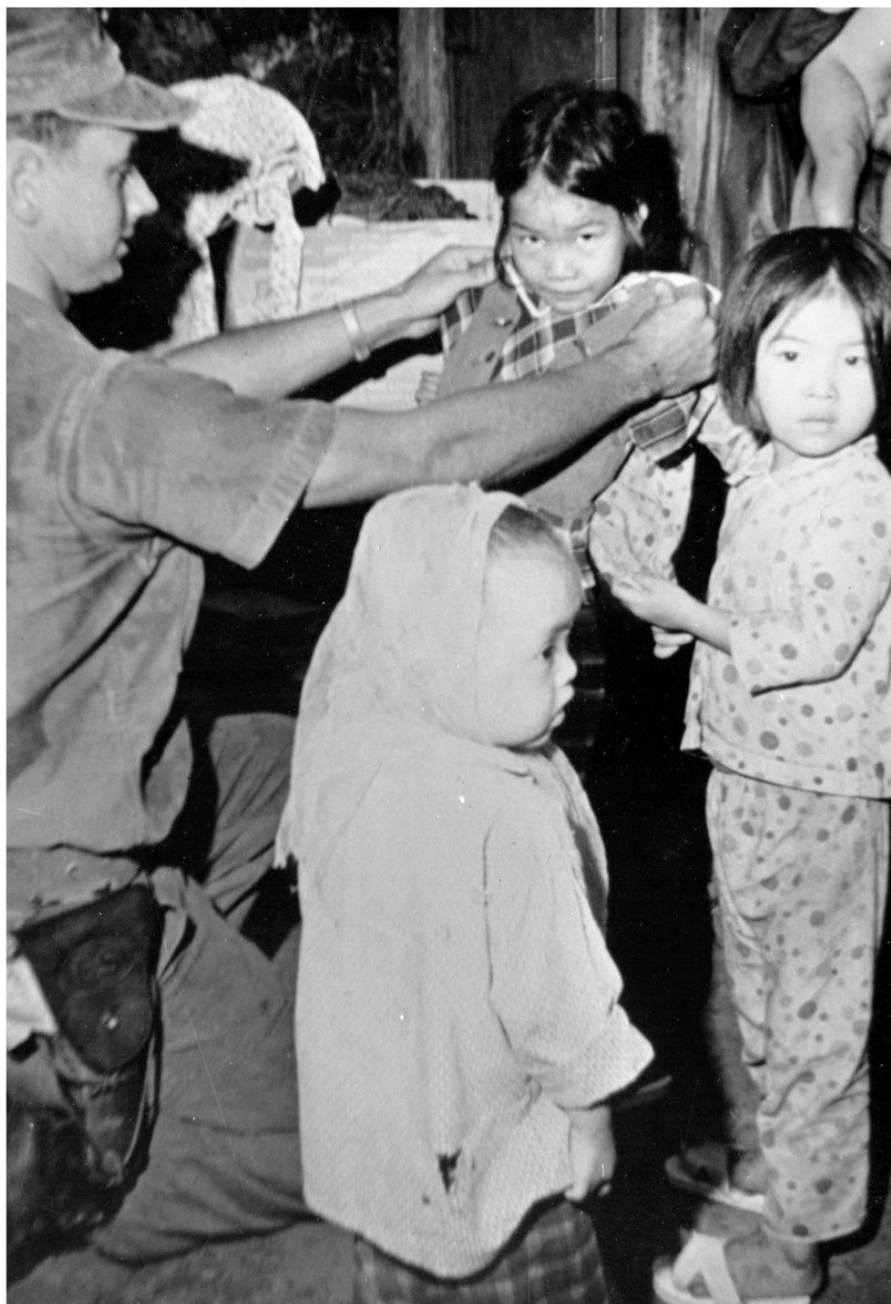

Fig. 6 In the villages and refugee camp, clothing donated by families and organizations in the States was distributed by the Seabees to the needy.

Fig. 16 MCB-7 Seabees donated funds to buy food and supplies for a nearby orphanage. They were delivered to a very grateful Sister Cecelia and her dedicated staff.
